If the skin is somehow damaged by an outside force, the body will respond to try to heal the damage and repair the skin, however, if the skin is constantly inflamed, it is more likely to respond by attacking that part of the body. Acne is a disease that causes extreme skin inflammation that may or may not be painful. Acne is most often associated with hormonal changes occurring around puberty, but can also occur at any age. Many people of all ages have acne, and many of them even have acne breakouts year after year. The treatment for acne will differ with the type of acne. In mild cases, you will want to focus on taking good care of your skin. You should wash your face with a mild cleanser every morning and night, and moisturize your face every morning and night. Avoid using an oil based cleanser, and avoid using harsh products to scrub your face. Some people need to use prescription topical medications. Although there are many products available, the first choice is often the combination of an antibiotic and benzoyl peroxide." Again, this is acne and not healthy skin or blemishes. This is the reason you should not over-wash your face. "When people who have acne get irritated and start washing their face repeatedly, they are usually adding to their problem. By repeatedly washing your face, you are stimulating your skin to produce more oil. When the oil is present, it blocks the pores that can lead to a break-out. When you clean your face, it means that you want to remove the bacteria that have been causing the acne break-outs. This does not mean you should be washing your face every day. Cleaning your face once or twice a week is enough." If you have dry skin, you might need to use a moisturizer. You should use moisturizer when you are in the bathroom, as this is when your skin tends to get drier. "Avoid doing more than two treatments per week. If you are doing twice a week treatments, you will get better results than doing every other day treatments." You should not use soap to wash your face. Soap removes the good skin oils from your face
