4b49f8405.pdf (s) \mid $K(s) = A \setminus S$, which means that $\{^* \text{partial information sets}^*\}$, i.e. $SK(s)$ for certain states s in SS , are completely described. [6]: Since we are focusing on model-checking, we do not have to distinguish between existential and universal models; we are using the more technical term model for all these. [7]: For this issue, it turns out that K[il] [Jle et al. [8]: Currently it is still not known if one can always compute all the reachable information sets. [9]: In the previous paper [10]: The graph $S_{\text{mathcal{R}}_XS}$ can be seen as an extension of the critical graph, where we keep track of states that are visited during the computation of $S_{\text{mathcal{R}}_XS}$. [11]: Note that the Cartesian product can be defined in a different way in the context of transition systems, cf. the work of Takahashi et al. [12]: The basis of this derivation is a result of Dershowitz and Reiter [13]: The motivation for this argument is an example that we have received from Boris Könighofer: He provides us with a simple intuitive example for the difference between SAS and SBS in Proposition [14]: He also notes that the situation is rather similar for systems whose nondeterministic choices are determined using an invariant (and not by sampling), i.e. SAS and SBS behave quite similarly for a large fraction of the runs, when it comes to a certain property, but for one small counter-example, their
