check if a particular value exists in an array in ruby I have an array and in that array there is an item with the value of something_1 I want to know if the item with the value of something_1 exists. I know i can write an if statement like this: `if(@array.include?'something_1')` But I want to do it in one line something like this: `if @array.include?('something_1')` or even this: `if @array.include?('something_1')` or 'something_2') but i want to do it in one line A: You can use include? in one line, though your syntax is wrong. Include? returns a boolean, not a string, and so you should be checking if the boolean is truthy, not if the string is truthy. if @array.include?('something_1') Efavirenz-nucleoside combinations as salvage therapy for HIV-associated CNS disease: current state and future challenges. The introduction of highly active antiretroviral therapy (HAART) revolutionized HIV-associated disease and has reduced mortality. Unfortunately, such therapy is not universally successful. The greatest challenge to HAART is the persistence of HIV in reservoirs such as the CNS and lymphoid organs that allow the virus to evade eradication. The combination of HAART with highly active antiretroviral agents (HAA) targeting the CNS has shown that viral load can be reduced, especially in the CNS. The most notable of these HAA is a nucleoside analog, efavirenz (EFV). EFV's half-life is approximately 4.8 hr, enabling it to penetrate the CNS. However, efficacy has been variable and is limited by toxicity and high rates of virologic failure. The duration of treatment with EFV and the associated treatment-induced toxicities are related to the plasma concentrations of the drug. Strategies to improve the penetration of EFV into the CNS, and thus reduce the rate of virologic failure, include increasing the dose and frequency of drug administration, adding ritonavir to the regimen, or changing the dosing frequency. Also, strategies to reduce treatment
