Risk factors for initiation of enuresis at a child care center in Japan. This study explored the risk factors for children experiencing enuresis in a child care center in Japan. The subjects were 997 children (3- to 8-year-old boys and girls) who were participants in the Japanese Maternal and Child Health Handbook of Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare Survey conducted in 2014. We used the "preschool enuresis" scale to measure "enuresis at a child care center" and the "preschool bedwetting" scale to measure "bedwetting at a child care center." We calculated the odds ratios (ORs) of "enuresis at a child care center" and "bedwetting at a child care center." We used multivariate logistic regression analysis to determine the risk factors for enuresis at a child care center. The ORs for the association between "enuresis at a child care center" and the following factors were significantly higher in boys than in girls: presence of siblings, presence of bedwetting siblings, not waking up due to nighttime voiding, waking up to void in the toilet, waking up to void in a bed, parent's diaper use to prevent bedwetting in the toilet, wearing diapers when sleeping in a bed, awareness of bedwetting in the toilet, and awareness of bedwetting in the room. The OR for the association between "bedwetting at a child care center" and the following factors was significantly higher in girls than in boys: awareness of bedwetting in the toilet, awareness of bedwetting in the room, and awareness of bedwetting in the house. These factors are risk factors for enuresis at a child care center in Japan.Self-perceived health, health satisfaction, and mental health among Pakistani children in the UK: Links to parental employment and mother's educational level. This study aimed to establish a relationship between self-perceived health, health satisfaction, and mental health among Pakistani children, and explored whether it was associated with parental employment and mothers' educational level. Data was obtained from 3 waves of Understanding Society, a longitudinal UK household panel study of the UK population, N =3,131, with 2,723 Pakistani children. Children self-reported how they felt about their health, health satisfaction, and experienced mental health at age 8 years. Parents self-reported their employment and education. The odds of poor

Man who pleaded guilty to stealing $7 million wants 'second chance' MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Connecticut man who pleaded guilty to stealing $7 million from the State of Wisconsin is asking the judge to reconsider his lifetime prison sentence. Daniel Jeffrey Tyack has been in prison for more than three years for the Jan. 9, 2015, break-in at a house in Buffalo County where he was supposed to have been hired to paint a mural. Tyack pleaded guilty to felony theft and burglary charges Monday in Buffalo County. Attorneys for Tyack are asking Judge Neal Nettesheim to consider his time in custody and the tax loss he's caused. They say he's never been violent. Nettesheim said Tuesday that he intends to take the argument into consideration. Tyack could have faced a life sentence but now faces five years and 10 months in prison under the plea deal.North Ayrshire Council North Ayrshire Council was the local authority for North Ayrshire in South West Scotland. The name was changed from South Ayrshire in 1996 following the local authority being reorganised. It was merged with South Ayrshire Council in 1999 to form the South Ayrshire and Arran Council. It was previously a unitary authority, but in 1995 it was divided into the districts of Kilwinning and Maybole which were both represented by single member wards. There was also a community council in Saint James. The local authority was based at 12 West Ayr Street, Ayr and the local authority offices were amalgamated into the Ayrshire and Arran NHS Trust in 2006. The previous office building was also demolished and replaced in 2014 by a modern office building shared by the NHS trust and NHS Greater Glasgow and Clyde. Councillors Election results 1996 election 1999 election Note: Ayrshire Council had a single council from 1996 to 1999, so vote changes are not shown. 2002 election 2007 election Note: Only one election was held in 2002 as the election on 5 May was cancelled. There was a twin election in 2007 as the election on 5 May was cancelled.
