In this tutorial, we will show how you can create a magazine-style page with different photo overlays by using Photoshop. 01 Download and launch Photoshop In order to get started with the current tutorial, you'll need the latest version of Photoshop, currently Photoshop CS6. Another option is to use a program that has a similar editing program such as Adobe Illustrator. Although the software is free, Photoshop does cost money. Therefore, it's advised to download a trial version to see if you like working with it before purchasing a full version. 02 Separate the image into pages It is important to create a separate file for each page that will be used in the magazine image. If you were to proceed with this tutorial and make all of your layers face each other, the final product would look rather messy, since each of the photo layers would simply be copying the photo layer. For each page, select File > New. In the bottom right, choose "Smart Object" from the drop-down menu. In the dialog box that opens, choose a desired width of 812 pixels and a height of 812 pixels. In the dialog box, specify 2 pages, and give each page a name (as shown in figure below). 03 Create a simple background To start the page layout, it is best to make a simple background. Right-click on the Background layer, and choose "Fill..." from the context menu. In the dialog box, select either the Solid Color or Gradient option. Select a color that will be both easy to read as well as visually interesting. 4 Begin with the four-page spread Right-click on the Layer 1 (colored) layer, and choose "Duplicate Layer". Drag the duplicate layer to the top of the stack. Remove the original layer 1 by clicking on the eye icon, and select "Hide Layer". Duplicate the first layer 1 (as shown below in the figure). Name the top layer "page1." Make the second layer "page2." Name the third "page3." Name the fourth "page4." 5 Pin the images to the pages Save this as a PSD file. Now we can go through and pin each of the four images to a particular page. Click on the

Apply Brush Tip Sharpness Adjustment Using the Brush Tool `Choose Window>Adjust>Highlight Soften.` `You'll see that the photo has a lot of artifacts from the process.` `Move the slider beneath the image's white box and stop it at about 50%.` `Now you have a flattened area where there are no artifacts.` `Copy this new area and paste it over the other bad spots.` `Now you have cleaned up the photo.` `Lower the slider until the white pixels are gray, then move the slider up or down until the white box is filled with gray.` `If you have brushes set up with the same settings, you may want to change them to match the effect you just achieved.` `Adjust the Brush Tip Size until the right size is visible.` `Set the Opacity to about 15%.` `This will make the brush looks really creamy. If you have too many soft edges, go to Window>Blend Modes>screen.` `Add an Inner Shadow.` `Add a Drop Shadow.` `Add a Gradient Overlay.` `Click OK to apply the blend mode.` `Lift your mouse over one of the hard edges and move it up or down to make the blend between hard and soft.` `You can also use an embossing brush to get rid of the shadows.` `Try duplicating the layer several times so you can make a variety of colors.` `You can also use an embossing brush to make shadows.` `With the brush, paint a selection around the outside area of the marquee to clear out the areas you won't be painting with your brush.` `Use the tool to reveal the white areas.` `In this example the marquee is a little too dark.` `Use a light brush, such as a 15% opacity brush, on the marquee and a dark brush, such as a 50% opacity brush, on the background.` `Highlight the white areas that you want to darken and use the brush to paint over them.` `This is a good place to use a blend mode of Screen to cut the dark spots.` `The marquee is much better now.`

AGOGAMA: Mary Jaya Rajagopal, who was hanged last evening for allegedly snatching a cell phone of a student in Agogama in 2010, will be remembered as the child of a middle class family. Madi Mary Jaya Rajagopal "She attended the primary school in her village and eventually won an entry for the nearby town's high school," said her mother, M. Jaya, who is four years older than her. "Her father, T. S. Rajagopal, a farmer, was trying to help his father, who was unwell, by working as a daily-wage labourer in the fields. However, the results of the 10th standard would have to be sent from another village and he would have to miss her school board. "During that year, my elder daughter died and my younger daughter had a fall and was injured. To take care of her, I took up a work and was not with my elder daughter." The younger daughter, Madi, was two years old. Her mother, a homemaker, said their family in Machilipatnam faced problems in raising the two children. "There was no ration of food and my husband would go fishing for livelihood. She was not in the habit of bringing up her daughter. She wanted to start her own business." Dressed in a black dress, Madi stood beside her mother as they recited the Shaala, the prayer, after the hanging. Ajithra Prabhu, a relative, has sought a CBI inquiry into the case. S.Venkateswara Rao, a social reformist, supported the family financially after Madi was given the death sentence. Balasubramaniam, who formed a farmers' cooperative, also came to the family's help. "Even after we approached the police, they did not take up the case." A few days before her execution, Madi told her mother that she was in love with a boy. "On the day of the hanging, she said she was not sad, since it was not a love affair but had gone to a party with a friend."You are here Andrea Mutti Andrea Mutti is a researcher at the Max-Planck Institute for Evolutionary Anthropology
