Wider view — display the images in a window in their entirety. — display the images in a window in their entirety. Inverted view — display the images upside down in a vertical orientation. You can easily see changes you make in the view at any time. Some views are based on a rating system. You can quickly select the images you want to rate, then apply a rating to your favourite images. Use the Histogram to check exposure It shows the brightness of the pixels. If the brightness of the pixels is distributed unevenly, you need to adjust it. Many users quickly find that their image is too light or too dark. If you see only black or white pixels, the image is too dark; if the pixels are evenly distributed, you're good. If the pixels are more concentrated in a single area, the image is too light. This invention relates to an apparatus for receiving a flow of fluid, such as gas or air and using the flowing fluid to inflate a predetermined volume of a cushioning material, such as a bag, more particularly, by receiving the flow of fluid in a vacuum chamber and displacing the resulting vacuum from the vacuum chamber to the cushioning material, so as to inflate the cushioning material to a predetermined height, and more particularly, by receiving the flow of fluid in a vacuum chamber having a predetermined, limited capacity and, at the same time, having a positive pressure which impinges on a cushioning material within the chamber to inflate the cushioning material to a predetermined height. The invention is particularly concerned with an apparatus for inflating a bag in a filling machine wherein the bag is made of a flexible material, such as pouches, which are filled with flowable product as the pouch is moved through the filling machine. The pouches are made from a flexible material and have edges which are adapted to be sealed within the filling machine. As the pouch is filled with a flowable product, it must be sealed closed, at its edges, to retain the product within the pouch and to prevent a leakage of the product from the pouch when it is removed from the filling machine and packaged for sale. The pouch, hereinafter referred to as the bag, is made of a flexible material and is brought from a pouch making and filling machine to a filling machine. The filling machine has a pouch conveyer which moves the bags through the machine and into the filling machine, usually, in a horizontal path. As the bags move through the filling machine, they are supplied with the flowable product to be retained within the bag. Typically, the flowable product is supplied to a pouch which, in turn, is supplied to the filling machine and, in the filling machine, the flowable product is retained in the bag for transfer to a packaging machine. The filling machine is a machine which fills a large number of pouches at the same time. To prevent the pouches from falling into the filling machine due to the movement of the bags through the filling machine, each bag is supported by a transverse support, at a predetermined distance from the horizontal axis of the filling machine. As the filled bags are removed from the filling machine, they are carried to a packaging machine wherein they are sealed together at their edges and the filled bag is subsequently cut into individual pouches. It is also well known that the bag can
