The Apple Pencil does what it says on the tin, and it does it well. The Bluetooth connection is solid, and images tend to look much more natural with the pressure sensitivity, making it easier to get a little more detail or depth into your work. It's also pretty convenient for drawing, with the easy-to-access buttons on the side of the Pencil. Some of the most welcome improvements in this update include a new Split tool that splits your brush into two halves, a Color Sampler, and the ability to zoom while using the Brush tool.

While it barely breaks a sweat when you're dragging a brush across an image, it's also pretty responsive when you're quickly sketching. This makes it easy to explore new concepts and provide feedback quickly on the fly.

iOS now has a sliceable feature. (Slice It's a face lab!) That means users can actually perform actions on that all-important full-frame slice of an image & can see the results immediately. In this case of Face Lab, we're talking about face matching. iOS 10+ users can now have the people and faces in their photos 'match'. It's a fun and rather quick way to make an outfit look like it might belong to one of those cute emoji characters. (It also, of course, makes for easy selfies with your best friend, and for those appropriate instances when a 3D-printed 3D selfie works so much better than a selfie in real life.)

Adobe is killing the phone app for new users. It's named Photoshop Express and it's available in all the standard places. However Adobe is first focusing on the easy to use (and free) app Express Canvas where most of the features go. I believe the new app will be called Photoshop Express Canvas.

Next, make sure you have the "Crop" layer selected, then you can use the Crop Border slider to change the size of the border you want.

With this, Apple users will finally be able to share their pictures from their iPhone and iPad into Photoshop files. The features of this bundle app for iOS and Android are available for free in the App Store and Play Store. In addition to releasing new features, Adobe also announced three new Adobe Stock partners at MAX - SimonLane.com, the travel search engine GDS Holdings, and Software Advice. These are some of the most popular stock photo sites out there, and popular for being straightforward in their pricing as well as an easy way to create your own stock images for use on websites and other projects within the creative brief. New features, tools and technology aren't the only things changed in Photoshop; Adobe also debuted two new user interface standards for the creative community, both available in May via a new Creative Suite release. These changes to the UI are only the beginning, with the goal of making Photoshop work in a matter of seconds. These new technologies align seamlessly with the increased collaboration of the Creative Cloud, connecting teams and users together for creative workflows where developers are designing, artists are working, and users are collaborating. The new user interface standard is based on Adobe XD, the industry-leading CSS-based web designer built for the web, and features a new layout that makes it easy to manipulate design elements like fonts, colors, and layouts right from the browser.
