

Powered by the critically-acclaimed Stellaris game engine, Federations is an expansion of the award-winning grand strategy game of human interstellar colonization, exploration, and diplomatic evolution. The expansion takes place in an uncharted, dangerous, and mysterious pocket of the galaxy, far from the reach of human spaceflight. Lead into this new galactic frontier through five new star systems Lay the groundwork for new species and discover the mysteries behind the wormhole Explore an exciting new environment Meet new alien species, traitors and powerful empires Take on the roles of 21 distinct alien races, from telepathic dwarves to massive hive-minds The power to begin and end your own stories in an ever-evolving open-world galaxy You lead the human race, working with the other great powers on a global scale, or you work alone in a fully sovereign vassal state... and a whole lot of other options in between. The choices you make on the global scale affect things at the vassal state level, and vice versa. Make enough friends with the right people, and you'll have bigger influence over global events, and better access to great diplomatic actions and bonuses. The race to become an interstellar superpower will be won or lost on the battlefield. Or use both simultaneously to crush your enemies and expand your domains! The options for espionage, science, and combat are presented in a new user interface, and expanded with numerous new technologies and ship systems. Five new star systems provide new starting points for new stories, and the pre-release demo includes a brief quest in one of the new star systems, allowing you to meet some of the new characters and races. What's new:

(novel) Saboteur is an espionage fiction novel by John le Carré. It was published by Jonathan Cape in 1977. The novel involves several protagonists, including a British spy named Freddie Benson and German scientist Alexander Afandi. It also portrays a 19th-century weaver who becomes the model for the character of George Smiley in both public and private. Critical reception has been mixed to positive. Plot The novel is the fourth in a trilogy of novels by John le Carré, following The Tailor of Panama and The Spy Who Came in from the Cold. It is also novel number 41 in the series of 49 Nazi espionage novels he wrote during the Cold War era. The book is set in 1902 and in the present day. Freddie Benson has been a British spy (responsible for the drafting of Chamberlain's Europe, a Nazi-controlled memo predicting that Germany, France, and Italy would not share the same trans-Atlantic alliance with the United States, but would ultimately drift apart with France remaining in alliance with Great Britain), an MI5 spy during the 1950s, and is now working with British Military Intelligence, MI6. Freddie is called to Berlin at the end of October 1902 to meet with von Saucken and George Smiley to finalize an assignment, codenamed Operation Moonlight. He is to use his political contacts to construct a network of undercover German spies that are to be planted in Britain at the moment of Operation Moonlight. En route to Berlin, Freddie flies via Glasgow, has tea with an enemy spy (listed in the novel as "Fergus Moss") and is booked into the Wallace Hotel in London. After a telephone call, he learns that his mission in Berlin will take place on November 1. Richard Tauber and a double agent known as Lena are now also on the trail of Operation Moonlight. Once in Berlin, Freddie meets Lena who only agrees to guide him because she has heard of his affiliation with Great Britain's Intelligence Service. Freddie visits Britain's Embassy in Berlin and talks with the British Ambassador in Berlin, Sir Leo Gowland. Sir Leo begs Freddie not to reveal the mission. Freddie meets in the presence of Smiley in Green Park, and Freddie makes his last contact in Berlin with Georg von Saucken. There he meets a young German named Hanrath who has grown up on Lange Saxon Radau Valley and is now a petrol pump attendant in Hamburg. Freddie continues with his rendezvous and is assigned a model for the characters of his
