Although coronary artery disease (CAD) is the leading cause of death in adults, CAD in younger subjects has received little attention. This Spanish population-based study attempted to ascertain the profile of CAD in the young. A complete questionnaire on the background, habits, risk factors and cardiac signs/symptoms was sent to 17,361 randomly selected subjects (12 years of age or more) of the Navarre Region population (41% women) selected by strata method. A cardiovascular examination and angiography were performed in 1487 subjects (8% of the 17,361 subjects). CAD was defined according to the criteria of the United States of America Framingham Study: abnormal exercise test; positive thallium scan; acute myocardial infarction, angina or angiographic coronary stenosis \geq 50% of the lumen diameter. The prevalence of CAD increased progressively up to the age of 60 years: 2.6% in men and 0.6% in women. Twenty-eight percent of men and 15% of women had none of the clinical markers of CAD. Seventy-six percent of the total CAD group were asymptomatic. The main predictors of CAD were age, hypertension and high cholesterol levels. Ten percent of the study population had abnormal exercise test, 60% thallium scan and 41% CAD. Coronary bypass surgery was done in 15 patients and percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty in 78; angioplasty was the first therapeutic approach in 16 patients. Ten percent of the young CAD patients had no clinical symptoms (angina or myocardial infarction), and 33% were asymptomatic (angina e79caf774b
