5/5 - The Action RPG I Wish I Could Play - 原神 崩坏 崩坏3 - H-Online 2019-03-14 14:54:05 (GMT+0) 2019-03-14 14:54:05 (GMT+0) Some people say they don't like action RPG because the hunting system is not realistic. I think I'm one of these people, but I don't. Whenever I kill an enemy, I feel like I accomplished something, and I feel like I have accomplished something when I kill an enemy of higher level than me. There is nothing more satisfying than defeating a stronger opponent. Back in the day, many JRPGs used to do this, and I felt good when I beat up an opponent of higher level than me back then. But then came the internet, and I started checking some fighters who were on the internet and they look all weak. Since all those games had a single-player mode, they focused on the way to develop your character, such as making your character faster, stronger, and more effective with level-up items. But I thought they didn't pay much attention to the hunting system. Now, I'm happy that Fantasy Idol brought back the fun of hunting. I feel that all your time and effort that you put in fights before level 20 to level up your skills was totally pointless. I never thought that a fantasy RPG would come back to do something that I thought it had disappeared. In the past, when I played J-RPGs, there was always a cat-and-mouse chase between the opposing forces and I enjoyed that. As long as you don't die, you can die without any loss of feelings. I really appreciated the well-made animation when you hit enemies and the sound effect that you hear when you use an item. And please don't make the hunting system like the one in the game. It just makes fights predictable. Now, the scenario, locations, and enemies are different from each other in each world, and I haven't seen that many swordsman and wizards in all of it. There are many cactus in the desert, so don't make the cactus like zombies. I want to talk about the cactus, but I'm bff6bb2d33

What's new:

If we've just made you scratch your head a little bit, the Elden Ring is the primordial force that control all the Elden gods. The war between the two races (a life-defending race and a soul-destroying race) began 7,000 years ago, until all humanity was annihilated. The survivors called themselves Elden. To survive, the Elden gained telepathy and started traveling to the Lands Between that were scattered. They discovered the Resolute, a holy symbol that could resurrect those killed by the aggressive race. Then, the Elden performed rituals to resurrect the elder gods and gain the power of the Elden ring, which leads to the Elden Gods. The two races are now separated into two parties: The Nexon party (The Hag, The Gargoyle, The Totem Bear, etc.) and the Imperial party (The Serpent, The Wolf, The Dragon, etc.). One day, the Nexon party members gain the power of the Elden ring, which leads to the development of the "Elden Gods" campaign. In the climax of the story you will finally meet the new Elden God.

The game is going to be release on PC on January 23rd in the US. No word yet on a release outside the US, or if there's going to be a portable version.

Paul will be hosting a preview of the game at PAX South, so remember to stop by if you're in attendance. There should also be a panel and hands-on demo during the PAX South Indie Megabooth, so don't miss it.
