REX4 Texture Direct with REX Soft Clouds Enhanced Edition @ PCGameMAPK activation by a superagonist stimulates Ca2+ influx via NMDA receptors in cultured rat hippocampal neurons. The p38/MAPK (mitogen-activated protein kinase) family is activated by various stress-inducing agents, including NMDA and neurotrophins, and has been suggested to play a role in the N-methyl-D-aspartate receptor (NMDAR)-mediated neuronal death. We found that the activation of p38 by a superagonist, such as a high concentration of spermidine, high K+, but not Na+, induced a sustained increase in intracellular Ca2+ and an elevation of cytosolic free Ca2+ concentration in cultured hippocampal neurons by the stimulation of NMDARs. In addition, blocking the activation of p38 with a highly specific inhibitor attenuated the Ca
